DistrictN4, a new pyridazinone derivatives with 3-phenoxy pyrazolo[4,3-d]pyrimidine moiety as potential PPAR α / γ dual agonists.

Two new

3-phenoxy pyrazolo[4,3-d]pyrimidine derivatives were synthesized and evaluated for their PPAR α / γ agonist activities. The results showed that N4 exhibited moderate PPAR γ agonistic activity and weaker PPAR α agonistic activity. In addition, N4 exhibited a significant synergistic effect on lipid metabolism of high-fat-diet-fed mice

It is the best place to get your game for free.Q: Azure Function with Rails API - how do I get table data to work? I have successfully deployed a simple Azure Function to a Function App with a single endpoint that accepts a POST request. That endpoint returns a JSON object but I need to do some processing before I return the object. Here's a simple React project that I've deployed to Azure using the "Web API action" and it works as expected. The problem is I need to retrieve some table data from a MySQL Azure table and then process that data as well. I've created an Azure function with the same deployment details (other than the app service plan and storage account) but no table data is returned when I POST a JSON object to the endpoint. Here's the index.js code that has been deployed to the Function App.

from './index';
exports.azureFunction = function(context,
req) { context.log('JavaScript HTTP trigger function processed a request.');

```
context.bindings.json =
JSON.parse(context.bindingValue.json);
context.done(); };

The function executes when I POST to it from the web browser: and I can see the "JSON" object is returned in the output window: But when I POST to it from my own app I get nothing. Any ideas why?

Update The Azure Function I'm trying to deploy is based on the sample app I noticed this sample has been updated for .NET Core

which is now the default runtime for azure
functions but it doesn't seem to support
MySQL any 0cc13bf012
