I am new to Cygwin and boost (although I have used Linux and Windows previously). I am trying to play around with `boost::thread_group` and just get a few things running. I am compiling using the following: `g++ -std=c++11 -pthread -pthread -o hello hello.cpp $(pkg-config --cflags --libs libpthread)` and have cygwin paths configured. This gives the following output: `./hello` Segmentation fault And: `$ g++ -std=c++11 -pthread -pthread -o hello hello.cpp $(pkg-config --cflags --libs libpthread)` Segmentation fault Any ideas what this might be? A: The library's pthreads implementation has visible flaws on Cygwin and other MinGW-based systems. It can be compiled manually, though. Alternatively, try boost's multithreaded library -- It
