RalfSteinmetzAndKlaraNahrstedtMultimediaSystems13pdf.Q: How to find hidden file from a folder that contains files like the one I'm looking for? I've created a file and then deleted it but, the file name is still written in "end of change log.log". How to see that file? A: The file name is still written in the log-file, because the file is still open. Use the command: lsof +L 1 To find your file name. Ask HN: Who backs up which files? - alexro This is mostly on-premise, but interested to hear about your personal, or your org's, experiences, and usage. ===== mindcrime _This is mostly on-premise_ I think that is going to be a part of the answer. People backing up to a directory on a server, or some such, _would_ depend on that directory being accessible, or at least, knowable to them. Whereas if you backup to a directory on some sort of appliance (NAS, SAN, other, etc.) that directory is going to be directable _from_ the appliance, and not _to_ the appliance. My experience has been more along the lines of backing up _to_ an appliance, and/or (more rarely) backing up to some sort of backend appliance. ----- PaulHoule (a) As a rule I back up to something off-site. (b) Backup to archive tape drives or hard disks, not dumb tapes or disks. Q: How to sort an arraylist by compareTo I want to sort an ArrayList with a
