To achieve his goal, Yamata-no-Orochi, a eight-headed dragon, has summoned a variety of warriors from throughout history to stand in his way. For centuries, these warriors have defeated one another, but this time is different. Susanoo, a master of the old ways, stands in his path to becoming immortal. As Susanoo engages in battle with the evil dragon, he slowly regains his lost power. Susanoo is on a mission to finish what he started: He must defeat Yamata-no-Orochi. By collecting Combat Scrolls, he will make his way through the battlefield and fight countless warriors. He may also find weapons and armor that can only be found at legendary locations across Japan. His journey will lead him to 12 armors, many of which are imbued with combat effects, giving users an advantage over their opponents. Murky Waters is a Roguelite Action game, which will change during each playthrough. Fights may last more than a minute. Upon defeat, the hero will lose Combat Scrolls and earn experience. In the quest to fight Yamata-no-Orochi, the hero will earn Combat Scrolls which can be equipped for a change of tactics. Other Events to be Announced Soon... As other events are implemented, the features and events will be expanded. Come back to see what additional features will be added. Turn 15 - Carrhae 53 BC Gameplay: Turn 15, turn 16, and turn 30 of the campaign each represent one month, with the former two representing the first month of the game. This means that the campaign can be played in real time. In that case, you'd play a single turn of the game and stop there, ending the game. If you want to play more, you can use the replay cards as described in the game instructions. Roman Army in Carrhae, 53 BC With 253 points, this Roman army is the strongest one. And its units are quite varied: the heavy archers are available for a first time in the game, but the Numidians are more like skirmishers than a large force that can bring a lot of points. That's why the Second Legion and the archers will only bring around 50 points in average. The other Roman units are rather balanced, as the Romans counted on foreign allies for their main operations (the main one being the Syrian auxiliaries). The Romans count on a strong infantry and archer line to go toe to toe with the Parthians cavalry. Unlike most AGE games, you don't play 6 legions on a field, you play 4 legions with each legion being a well balanced force. They can also claim victory in a single turn, provided the leading legion has 20 or more points. So the fact that they don't come with a foreign legion obviously matters less here. To be honest, the whole campaign is a bit misleading with some unlucky events at the start of the game. Here is the order of the Episodes (better described as the turns that divide a campaign) of the AGE game Carrhae 53 BC: Ep. 1: Turn 1-4: The last Episode of this first phase is a bit unlucky, it will be described later. Ep. 2: Turn 5-9: With the Second Legion behind the First, this campaign is quite easy to play. You should first build your capital city, Seleucia. It's not that efficient to use it as a relay station for the Syrian auxiliaries (all of them are twice as fast in a straight line), so you should use it to collect as much gold as you can as quickly as possible. It will also improve your diplomatic field quite quickly. You'll also raise your influence and expand your influence radius too. Ep. 3: Turn 10-

What's new in Vectorium Original Soundtrack:

of Drucelli Coming to the forest of Drucelli was perfect timing, as the forest has been abandoned since 1990 and is falling into disrepair. As my trip home grew closer, my imagination began to wonder, will the forest still be there in the autumn? Dropping my bags at the Luggage Service in Djerba, I decided to take the chance and see what was so special about this forest. Drucelli Forest in Djerba Entering the forest, I began to notice that this was no mere derelict town forest. Crossing a long bridge, I looked over the pine and oak trees, admiring the contrasts of lights and shadows against the dark sky, realizing just how rural this place was, as I stood in the middle of nowhere. A further exploring of the forest brought to life the history of this hidden treasure, having been purposely abandoned in 1989, when the huge explosion occurred at the Bab al-Bahr Power Station. Villagers who lived in the forest began to abandon their homes as toxic sludge and debris drifted over the forest. In hopes of moving on, residents caught on vehicles and motorcycles filled the roadways. Finally, the authorities closed off the area and sealed up the entrance. This disaster was followed by several obstacles that stopped people from entering. There wasn't much access remaining and instead, the woods became an ecological preserve. Eventually, the woods were sold to an English company, which had plans to construct a cruise ship port, adding to the toxic contamination problem. Little more than a century ago, the forest wasn't as isolated. With the railroad running through the heart of the forest, getting to Dubalous in Lissa seemed easy. But the railroad is now mostly filled with gravel, and uncooperative and sparse of cars to traverse. With the trees turning red and yellow, the lush green forest was now a crisp and arid scene of orange and gray trees. The Italian consortium group, Ferrovie della Grecia, is now selling off pieces of the city's woodland area. Drucelli didn't promise to be an easy life in the interior of what was formerly called the Hidden Sanctuary. The exit was blocked, and access would be available only by boat. At that time, there were only two entrances left, both at the sea. Despite all the obstacles, tourists and people alike could find their way into the protected area through Djerba's port.

document.getElementById('clickhere').setAttribute('href','');
document.getElementById('clickhere').removeAttribute('href'); The actual in-game download links are from a cracked site, although the final link will indeed work regardless. I don't know what blue text without href meaning above line of javascript is. Here I want to simply make the actual "click here" clickable but it is not clickable if I place it at end of line. If I place that at any other place of page - it works properly, but not works here because of actual thing I want to convert to real link, I think. How could this work? A: The element. And the Javascript that you've already given doesn't seem to be working properly. I would recommend creating your own html element and replacing your current
