1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a cationic epoxy resin for a cationic electrodeposition coating agent with excellent properties and which can be used for a variety of uses, and to a cationic electrodeposition coating agent containing this cationic epoxy resin.

2. Description of the Related Art As a technique for protecting metallic surfaces in the automotive field, an electrodeposition coating (also referred to as electrocoating) that is a pretreatment for undercoating and topcoating is known. Among these pretreatments, an acidic electrodeposition coating has been most commonly employed. This acidic electrodeposition coating comprises an acidic epoxy resin, the molecular structure of which is characterized by a partly etherified epoxy functional group, a carboxyl functional group and an amino functional group, as a cationic resin that is in the state of being at least partly neutralized. When acidic electrodeposition coating is used, the metal surface being treated has a hydroxyl group exposed at the surface thereof, and in addition, a phenomenon (sometimes referred to as metal blush) occurs in which metallic oxides are left on the hydroxyl group exposed at the surface. In particular, the phenomenon of metal blur is a marked phenomenon in car-related objects. In recent years, development of
