Endurium is the protagonist's strange and curious destiny. He struggles to find something that feels normal after his life was thrown into chaos. He will experience multiple twists and turns throughout his journey, where he will make friends and foes. However, he will always seek to find the answer to one question: "Will he become an angel of death?" "the simulation could be called a real entertainment, it's a virtual reality". Take the plunge into a world you know, while you find out it is much stranger and a lot more than you ever imagined. Story and world were designed by Thomas Hodapp. - Worlds (5) - STOCKROOM (1x): a place where you can find all possible items, money, food, and weapons. There are also few helpful people on this place. If you are not found by someone, you can either go back from the door, or follow the noise that you can hear, so you can easily find someone. MARKET (2x): a place where you can buy food and weapons. You need money from the STOCKROOM to buy things. HOUSE (1x): it's the place where you should stay. It is the best place to sleep, learn new skills, and even sell the loot you found. - Systems (12) - Your character is in the simulation of a virtual world. The world has 464x384x370 polygons, and you can't see more than 100x100x100 area. - Your character - You can choose your character's gender, skin, hair color, and facial hair. You can then customize the skin and hair color. You can also get the hairstyle and facial hair you want. Your character's face is visible, so it's nice to see how you look as your avatar. All of these items will be saved, and you can use them for the next "game" you play. Your character is walking in the simulation, but sometimes, it's moving slowly, and sometimes very fast. - The gameplay (5x) - The plot of the game is like the legend of Sargon's death. You are the last person that remembers Sargon, and the first person who will try to save him. Your first task is to figure out how to save the king. You will talk to people in the simulation and other places. You will find all the stuff you need to get things done. You

Fowl Space is a crazy journey you'll never forget. With multiple stages filled with randomness, destroying the sun is no easy feat. Fowl Space is a top-down action game inspired by crazy indie games such as Spelunky and Fez. War may have been declared between the Zun and earthlings, but that hasn't stopped one brave Dalek from stepping out of his gladiator costume and into a suit of armor in order to defend his earth home from an alien invasion. Experience the full force of a gladiator in your hardsuit and crush your enemies in high definition VR – NOW AVAILABLE ON THE VRSTUDIO! Key Features: - Rift Engine VR - PlayStation VR - HTC Vive - Oculus Rift - Move controllers - A PlayStation 4 controller - Or a full motion controller (optional) - Additional controllers (optional) - SteamVR About This Game: VR Gladiators is a co-op multiplayer VR experience where you fight off the invading Daleks as they try to take over the Earth. You get to control a gladiator in your hard suit and it's up to you to save the planet from being wiped out by them scaly bastards. Controllers: You get to play with any game controller or set of game controllers you have. It doesn't matter what type (we recommend using a dualshock, Playstation controller, or motion controllers). You can also use your PS4 controller and Move controllers to play if you already own those. Note: You must use the Rift or HTC Vive and a VR Audio headset as those are the only ones that will play VR Gladiators. It's space… and it's bright. If you're like most people, you're asleep in bed. Perhaps there is a light on in the room. But if that's the case you're probably lying in your bed too lazy to turn it off and probably too sleepy to care. If that's the case, then you should be enjoying a glorious sleep which is easily disturbed by nothing more than a changing planet. This game changes the entire concept of waking up. Wake up to the sound of literal space rain, driving you from a comfortable bed and into a spaceship. You are the captain of your own course, the only one that matters. Please support our next title!Arrog is an enigmatic puzzle adventure game featuring hand-drawn art and set in a bizarre black-and-white world with color accents. FeaturesA tale about the journey of a man accepting his death through his dreams.A unique black-and-white art style and traditional animations used in a bizarre world.An intense 30-minute narrative experience.A hand-crafted soundtrack for each section of the game. Game "Arrog" Gameplay: The Disney version is certainly one of the best I've seen, but the

'young lad' version of Thor was the only truly 'out of place' action figure in my collection. It was fun to play with him but the story of Eeyore is much better than the movie. What is a Flashback Friday? I thought it was a meme. Oh, I see. _____I am no longer angry with you, Glide, you did not bring the zombies to Baskerville. you were only the messenger of evil that fueled the fire that I pushed. Forgive me my servant, and I will forgive you, Mr. Darwin. On the subject of Thor, does anybody remember the first time they played it? Did you play it until you learned that "The key is in the saddle..."? I remember the end of the game being a bit blurrie for me back in the day. I had figured it out, but not really in any vivid detail. _____ Quote: Originally Posted by Shataka This Pic has a message this is My Journey if you think you can you can take it i just thought it was very fitting! What's new:

: Preparing Our Nation for a New Generation of Cyber Attacks By Thomas A. Maier and Keith Fournier July 28, 2018 The U.S. military services face a wide variety of complex cyber defense challenges. These include countering cyber threats at the endpoints of an attack, cyber counterintelligence, data loss prevention, cybersecurity incident response, and offensive cyber operations. As cyber defense evolves to meet these challenges, it is important to ensure it will not preclude its mission. The military service must demonstrate it is able to execute the full range of defense operations in a manner that is calculated, deliberate, and sensible. Retreat from our ability to defend the homeland or to combat current adversaries would leave us vulnerable to a devastating second attack. As a public service organization tasked with defending the United States and protecting our nation from attack, we begin our 2088 series with our vision for cyber defense. Cyber Defensive Vision Cybersecurity readiness is not a matter of speed, but of our ability to thrive. We owe our children and grandchildren a world that is safe, free, secure, and prosperous. If we continue to leave our shores exposed, we can expect the next generation to suffer what we now endure. America's military prepares to find its way back home. Meanwhile, it is losing ground with another nation. This gap will probably be addressed with economic pressure, showing we remain a relevant country and can be relied on to champion and protect the right to a secure and peaceful existence for our citizens. Our forefathers fought and died to protect the freedoms we enjoy. They fought to ensure that our great nation remained free and independent. We protect them by living up to their highest standards. Today, America is free to look at itself. We have a unique, unmatched ability to confront threats to our homeland. This is the national security that is the ultimate guarantor of our freedoms and way of life. We live and work and play in a world that is now smaller. And that world is shrinking at a rate that leaves us open to attack by countries possessing significant technology superiority. Despite cyber security advances, cyber technology—its spectrum and scope—remains larger than ever. The proliferation of low-cost devices and smart technology, powered by energy sources that are inexpensive and in demand, is a big concern. The 2015 report, Game Over: The Cybersecurity Revolution That Is

Overminding America, points out that current political uncertainties in foreign markets

Microcosm is an exclusive game only released on Steam. I've not made any money from the game to date. It's truly a labour of love. Since your voxel world is made of nothing more than 512x256x512 voxels, you can create pretty big worlds on pretty powerful systems. I've played on a single-core i7-4790k processor and a dual-core i5-6600k processor. Microcosm is cross-platform. It runs equally as well on Windows, Mac, or Linux. On PC, it is possible to launch Microcosm in docked and undocked modes. Docked mode places the virtual reality camera in the center of the screen, whereas undocked mode places the virtual reality camera in the top left. Dedicated control schemes have been crafted for both VR controllers. You can change your virtual reality headset to any of the Vive, Rift, or Rift + Touch. It's possible to change your virtual reality headset at any time during the game. There are no loading screens or pre-rendered frames. Microcosm has a soundtrack that you are not able to turn off in settings, however it is possible to turn off the music with the audio controls during gameplay. There are no door locks. I believe you can lock the door when you're ready for people to leave. Microcosm does not have any hidden worlds, save for the "Cave of Secrets" which contains an unlocked room with a secret room (ie, the blue and red flags are correct). Microcosm is made of 2048 voxels (64×64×64 voxels). Microcosm has a level editor. You can edit the levels on your desktop and save and load them. It's possible to save your creations as.cosm files (currently the only supported format), and share them with other people using the steam workshop. There are no nested levels (currently the only supported format).? System Requirements: The recommended system requirements are: - PC: Intel i5-7500 @ 3.8GHz - Mac: Intel i5-5200 @ 2.3GHz - Linux: Linux AMD64-compatible processor - VR: Any
