Reviews "ELDEN RING" game: AdvertisementNo. 26: In a town with no cereal, I'll take a box of Kellogg's Frosted Mini-Wheats I still consider myself somewhat of an advanced college student despite having graduated many years ago. I'm the one who eats fast food, watches questionable television and mostly defaults to microwave meals. It goes without saying that I'm rarely in the mood to shop for food. The only meal I get excited about is breakfast. So you can imagine how I felt when I received an e-mail last week about a campaign to commemorate the start of snow season. Someone has been dreaming of nothing but snow and waking up to snow for weeks now. And so I volunteered to collect at least a box of cereal in my town from the beginning of the month until the end of the month and ship it to a fellow snow lover for her very own snow-themed Cheerios. In a town of about 7,500 people, I went to 7 stores in the snowless town on the cusp of Pennsylvania, where I found that there was only one box of cereal at a store I'd never been to before. The message in my inbox beckoned me to collect the box of cereal and ship it to a town hall in the Alps for shipment to the high alpine peaks of Switzerland where the snow lovers reside. But I needed to carry out the assignment. So I went back to the store and stocked up on more cereal. The message in my inbox was still coming in. But by the time I was done with my shopping, there was only one box of cereal left. So I packed my two bags of cereal and left the store. I cried in the car on the way back to my hometown. I cried when I dropped off my shopping and left the town I'd called home for my whole life. I had to carry out the assignment. I had to pick up the box of cereal at 7 stores in two different towns, both of which the stores I'd never been in, and bring it to an unreachable destination. After a week of reporting my progress, I found out that it was almost impossible to carry out my assignment. I was going to have to stop feeding my snow hobby. But I could still help someone else. I sent a box of cereal to a town I'd never been to before. bff6bb2d33
