Contrast enhancement of the renal cortex in acute pyelonephritis: sensitivity and specificity in comparison with tomography. The results of contrast-enhanced helical computed tomography (CT) in 78 patients with acute pyelonephritis have been analysed. Contrast-enhanced CT was obtained at least 5 days after the onset of symptoms. The pattern of contrast enhancement of the renal cortex was evaluated by determining the percentage of the normal cortex enhanced. In 6 patients (7.7%) only a few areas of increased density in the cortex were observed, and a specific diagnosis of pyelonephritis could not be made. A specific diagnosis was achieved in 39 patients (50%) and in the other 33 patients (43%) a correct diagnosis could be made. The sensitivity and specificity of contrast-enhanced CT were 75% and 80% respectively. The sensitivity was higher in patients with purulent bacteriuria than in patients with sterile bacteriuria and without bacteriuria. The results of the present study indicate that contrast-enhanced CT can play a role in the evaluation of patients with acute pyelonephritis.Q
